DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This two story stone house is four bays wide and about two bays deep. It faces west on Railroad Avenue toward the quarry and rests about five feet back from the road. It has a gable roof with a central chimney on the ridge. It is rectangular with a centralized plan. There is a one story addition on the east side which extends the full length of the house. It is covered with asbestos shingle suggestive of stone work in a random ashlar design on the west and north facade. It appears as though the shingle covers wooden siding or clapboard which may in turn cover a stone exterior. The house has a stone foundation covered partly by cement.

The main entrance is located in one of the center bays. There is a small one bay entrance porch covered by a shed roof. Cement steps lead up to the porch which is enclosed by a plain wooden railing. All of the windows are one over one, double hung sash windows.

The house is about two bays deep although there are no windows found on either side. The north facade connects directly to McDermott's Tavern (163 Church Lane). The south facade is covered with stone.

The east addition is constructed of stone and covered with a shed roof. There is a back entrance door on the south side and two irregularly placed windows. On the second story of the main section of the house there are two, six light, knee windows.

The house looks as though at one time it may have been a duplex. One of the center windows on the first floor is slightly smaller than the others, and appears as though it may have been an entrance door to the north half of the duplex. Also the placement of the windows tends to divide the house into two sections since they group together on each side of the west facade.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This stone dwelling represents an architecture typical of small towns and rural areas in Maryland. The builders made use of natural materials from the area using stone possibly from one of the local quarries. It is a duplex which has proven to be ^a typical of the ~~settlement pattern~~ in Texas.
